Annotation
Final Qualifying Work
Ma Junqing
«INFORMATION SECURITY AND THE NEED TO COUNTER TERRORISM ON THE EXPERIENCE OF THE CHINESE MEDIA»
Scientific adviser: Nikolay Sergeevich Labus
The Department of international journalism
Full-time study

Final qualification work is devoted to the problem of reflection of terrorism and its information components in China.

This paper studies the interaction between the state and the media in combating terrorism and addressed the question: how do the Chinese media affect the citizens.

The research urgency is caused by the fact that recently in China has been organized by the terrorist acts of different nature, which was not a long time in the country. Citizens of China were not awareness of the dangers of terrorism. As the occurrence of unfortunate events, the Chinese media began to counter terrorism and it affected people in the country

The object of study is the counteraction to the terrorism of the Chinese media its information component.

Object of research is the information policy of China in the fight against terrorism, the regulation of information security and anti- terrorism by the Chinese media.

Empirical base of research are materials of the website of the newspaper "Renminribao", materials China Central television, the website of the newspaper "Fenghuang"..

The objective of this work is to study the information component of terrorism on the example of the Chinese media, the analysis of methods of the reflection in Chinese media and the problem of combating terrorism.

To achieve this goal the following tasks were solved:

-to study the history of terrorism in China, and information component;

-find out the political decisions of the state in countering terrorism;

-to collect examples of terrorist events in China and materials about them in Chinese media.

Research methods: analysis, synthesis, generalization, comparison, analogy, historical method.

The novelty of the research lies in the detailed analysis of the causes of terrorism and its impact on the consciousness of the people through the media, as well as the organization of possible conditions to ensure information security in the country.

The structure of the project is determined by the logic of the task. The research consists of introduction, two chapters, conclusion and list of used literature.

The first Chapter describes the terrorism and its information component, lists the specifics and the history of terrorism in General, discusses the information security and its structure.

The second Chapter studied the information particularly China and the analysis of how the media and the impact of counter-terrorism, how to ensure information security in China, as well as political attitudes of the Chinese leadership to counter terrorism.

In conclusion the results of the study and formulates conclusions.

The bibliography includes both legislative acts: laws, decrees of the President, and various educational and methodical manuals, publications, scientific articles, foreign literature and Internet resources.